

Cicily Scott joins the C5 Team as a specialist who sources the world's best talent to tell the world's most interesting stories. Cicily began her TV career at CNN where she met founding members of the C5 team, learning from them how personal stories and expert analysis give context and enhance the visuals. From giving voice to victims during 9/11 to chasing presidents through parking lots at the African Union and Munich Security Conference, Cicily has helped news outlets like CNN, Al Jazeera English and TRT World cover events that changed the world - pivotal elections, the Arab Spring, wars and natural disasters. More recently, Cicily flipped her "always behind the camera" habit to hopping on screen as a Host for crowd-sourced news platform, Happs.

Cicily remains committed telling a great story and helping individuals and organizations get their messages out most affectively. In addition to time in news, Cicily also produced the popular "Hot Topics" segment for the Barbara Walter's globally popular talk show, "The View". Outside of work, Cicily is an avid traveler, exploring over 115 countries through incredible adventures such as completing the Trans-Siberian railway, dancing at the Festival Sur Le Desert in Mali, attending the Mass Games in North Korea and racing a tuk-tuk badly the length of India. Cicily is an alumnus of Emory University in Atlanta (BA), the University of Bergen in Norway and Lund University in Sweden (MA).